Excerpt from The South African Mining Journal, Vol. 22: With Which Is Incorporated the South African Mines, Commerce and Industries; Part I; March 1, 1913 Mu. M. G. 151.s brought his very successful period of office as President of the Chamber of Mines to a close (n Thursday with an address of unusual interest and importance. The address is sufficiently voluminous to fill half an issue of this journal, and our readers must be content with a sum mary and indication from us of its leading points. A dozen articles might more easily be written than one on the matters discussed by Mr. Elkan, and their very number and variety afford an excellent illustration of the innumerable ways in which the mining industry affects the well being of the country. The speech was enriched with manv exclusive and first-hand statistics; with some statesmanlike Opinions on the outstanding problems of the industry, and with several valuable practical suggestions, of which more is certain to be heard. Naturally the President of the Cham ber is in a position to collect and publish the most striking and informative statistics regarding the industry, and some of these may be here strung together from various portions of his address. Thus it is most satisfactory to learn that the death-rate for native employes fell from per thou sand per annum in 1911 to in 1912. In 1912, natives were supplied by the Witwatersrand Native Labour Association and independent recruiters, and the native labour position is more satisfactory than it has been for many years. Stores consumed by the mines in 1912 were valued at European salaries called for and native wages Rockdrills have increased in number from...
