Excerpt from Administration of Fiscal Year 1996 International Affairs Budget Request: Hearing Before the Committee on International Relations, House of Representatives, One Hundred Fourth Congress, First Session, March 30, 1995 The committee met, pursuant to call, at 2:03 p.m., in room 2172, Rayburn House Office Building, Hon. Benjamin A. Gilman (chairman of the committee) presiding. Chairman Gilman. The committee will come to order. We welcome Secretary Christopher to this afternoon s hearing on the administration s fiscal year 1996 budget request for International Affairs. Secretary Christopher, it is a pleasure having you with us once again. Secretary Christopher will be followed by a panel that will include Brian Atwood, the Administrator of the Agency for International Development and Lieutenant General Thomas Rhame, the Director of the Defense Security Assistance Agency. For nearly 50 years, our American foreign policy has been shaped predominantly by the challenges of the Cold War. The economic and security assistance programs that we established to support the cause of freedom and the institutions to carry them out trace their bipartisan roots to the Truman Doctrine and to the Marshall Plan of 1947, and the critical support was provided by the Republican Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Senator Arthur Vandenberg. With the end of the Cold War, we heard a great deal about the need to rethink the architecture of our foreign policy. With annual budget deficits running annually in the range of $200 billion, there is no question that we are going to have to reshape, reform and reduce our assistance programs as well as the organizations that implement them. In so doing, we will strengthen our ability to meet the new challenges and take...
